About Me

I am wife to a hardworking man, mother to an active 6-year-old boy, caretaker to two Siberian cats, knitter with a sock obsession, health nut, chronic dieter, and lover of all things fantasy.

I began my first blog nearly 10 years ago following a chemical burn injury at work. This journal evolved through several variations and eventually came home to Tyrneathem.

About Tyrneathem

The name "Tyrneathem" is derived from a bit of Gaelic combined with some good old fashioned imagination. It roughly translates to "Children of the Dragons." The pronunciation varies a bit each time I say it, but it's most often "tur-NEATH-um."

My readers are primarily female. They are typically mothers of school-age children, but I have a substantial amount of other demographics too. My readers are most interested in my giveaways, reviews, and weight loss posts. I receive an average about 5,000 unique visitors per month with a total of over 25,000 page views.

Site design and graphics were done by me. I also do some small design work for others.
